

Member nomination of beneficiaries

This information helps the Trustee distribute any super and insurance payable by AvSuper if you die while a member. Under current legislation, you can nominate those dependants you want to receive this money. If you do not have any dependants, your benefit will be paid to your legal personal representative (estate). Please refer to the Nominating beneficiaries fact sheet on our website for further information.

You can update your nomination at any time by completing this form. Please send your completed and signed form to AvSuper Admin, GPO Box 634, Canberra ACT 2601. If the witness statements section is completed overleaf, this form must be mailed in to us, as an original copy of witness signatures is required.

Nominating beneficiaries

When a member dies, the AvSuper Trustee determines how to pay your death benefit (i.e. who gets how much of your super and any insurance payouts) in accordance with the law.

If you make a valid binding nomination by having it witnessed, the Trustee must follow your instructions. If you do not make a valid binding nomination or more than 3 years has passed since you made one, the Trustee has the final say in how your money is distributed but will take any non-binding (preferred) nomination into consideration.

Your annual statement and AOL list your beneficiaries as reversionary, binding or non-binding and show the date when any binding nominations expire.

Note: if you want to nominate your dependant as a reversionary beneficiary for your income stream account, please use our income stream reversionary nomination form.

This nomination applies to my ☐ super account* ☐ income stream account* ☐ defined benefit account (tick all that apply)

* If you have more than one of the same type of account and only want to change beneficiaries for one of them, please provide the account number or we will change all accounts of that type.

Important information about dependants

Dependants are your spouse (including defacto and same sex), children (including stepchildren, ex-nuptial children and adopted children), and any other person with whom the Trustee considers you had an interdependency relationship at the time of your death.

Two people are considered to have an interdependency relationship if each of these conditions is met:

- they have a close personal relationship
- they live together
- one or each of them provides the other with financial support, and
- one or each of them provides the other with domestic support and personal care.

An interdependency relationship also exists where there is a close personal relationship and either or both people suffer from a physical, intellectual or psychiatric disability. In these circumstances there is no requirement for cohabitation or provision of financial or domestic support. A close personal relationship is one that involves a demonstrated and ongoing commitment to the emotional support and well-being of the two parties.

The definition is not intended to include people who share accommodation for convenience (eg flatmates) or people who provide care as part of an employment arrangement or on behalf of a charity.
